

MTA

OPERATOR

New York City Metropolitan Transit Authority. How can I help you?

CALLER

Hello? Is this the subway?

OPERATOR

Miss, this is the New York City MTA. We operate and manage the subway system, yes. How can I help you today?

CALLER

I'd like to speak to the person who designed the posters.

OPERATOR

Posters?

CALLER

Yeah, you know. The ones in the subway.

OPERATOR

Okay, Miss. We have hundreds of different posters in the subway at any given time. Furthermore, an ad agency designed them.

CALLER

Then I'd like to speak to furthermore.

(Cont.)

OPERATOR

Excuse me?

CALLER

Put me through to furthermore, the ad agency designing your posters.

OPERATOR

Oh, sorry, you misunderstood.

CALLER

No, me Miss Underwood.

OPERATOR

What?

CALLER

My name is Miss Underwood.

OPERATOR

Oh gosh, I am so sorry, Miss Underwood. What I meant was...

CALLER

What's your name?

OPERATOR

Bridget.

CALLER

Hi Bridget. I want to speak to the person in charge of the posters that say

"If you see something, say something."

OPERATOR

Oh... I get it.

(Cont.)

CALLER

No, you Bridget.

OPERATOR (Shuffling papers, annoyed)

Okay...yes, you're right. My name is Bridget. The company that created those ads is...

CALLER

Because I saw something, Bridget.

OPERATOR

In the subway?

CALLER

Yes. I saw something and now I want to say something.

OPERATOR

Oh my stars!

CALLER

How did you know my name, Bridget?

OPERATOR

What?

CALLER

You just called me by my first name?

OPERATOR (Confused)

I... I...

CALLER

Star Underwood. Though nobody has called me 'Stars' since college.

(Cont.)

OPERATOR

Okay, this is obviously some sort of joke. I'm gonna give you the name of the ad agency and you can call them yourself.

CALLER

Don't you want to know what I saw?

OPERATOR

Excuse me?

CALLER

I saw something, now I want to say something. Guess what I saw.

OPERATOR

I'm hanging up.

CALLER

No, you Bridget.

(FX: CLICK!)